

“To learn
a foreign language
you must make a thousand mistakes.”

For Esperanto it's only 250.

Learning a foreign language means memorizing a lot, and practicing a lot, and making mistakes a lot, until you've practiced every part of the grammar.

But you can learn Esperanto four times faster than other languages. Because the grammar is very regular and streamlined. No big lists of exceptions, no irregular verbs. Learn a rule and start using it; you know you're using it correctly. And it's completely phonetic. The result? You can become fluent — actually able to speak and read Esperanto — four times faster than you could learn other languages.

Maybe that's why two million people all over the world speak Esperanto.

Esperanto — the international language that works.
