Who knew love could be so complicated?

And in French yet. (They are the forms of the verb “to love,” minus some duplicates.) In fact, if you study almost any national language, you’ll need conjugations like this or something just as complicated.

But if you learn Esperanto... you’ll never need it.
Only six verb endings for all verbs (ami, amis, amas, amos, amu, amus).
Only four noun endings.

Regular.

Phonetic.

Four times faster to learn, two million people speak it.

Simple facts.

(By the way... that’s just French’s first conjugation. There are three more.
Plus irregular verbs. Are you sure you need it?)
